When Stoutridge's owners, Stephen Osborn and Kimberly Wagner, imagined their vineyard, they envisioned Riesling grapes, slow wine philosophy and a European-style winery based on German design.

The pair came into the process with several design ideas that would make the experience of the buildings more pleasing. From the start, they knew that the windows had to be authentic — shuttered, secured with Cremona bolts, and able to open inward. As an additional touch, instead of permanent exterior window screens that give buildings a dull look, Hirschmann integrated their imported retractable screen product into all the in-swing French Casement windows for a screen-on-demand solution.

A Hirschmann folding door connects Stoutridge's conference room with the roof deck creating easy access and affording beautiful views into the vineyard. Five French doors complete the winery's integration with the outdoors.
